HISTORY OF CAFÉ de PARIS

Many postcards exist of the historic building on Kruisweg. On the occasion of the visit of Queen Wilhelmina and Queen Regent Emma to Haarlem on September 23, 1892, the arch of honor was built and placed where the current Café de Paris is located on Kruisweg and Parklaan (formerly Achter nieuwe gracht and Tweede nieuwe gracht). In the Rijksmuseum, a commemorative album is exhibited in remembrance of this visit. According to the Census Register, the prosperous Taunay family lived here in 1929, and they played a role in the history of Suriname. They lived right next to Adriaan van der Willigen, a well-known politician, playwright, and art historian who left his complete memoirs and writings to the city library of Haarlem.

In the early 1900s, the Meteor bicycle factory and shop were established in the building on Kruisweg and Parklaan. After several retail businesses in 1973, the current Café Paris was opened by the de Looze family, next to the adjacent snack bar and Campina ice cream shop run by G. Willemse. The café, recognizable by the Côte d'Azur umbrellas on its terrace, grew to become one of the most well-known drinking establishments in Haarlem. Later, the snack bar was integrated into the café, and it became first Petit Paris and later Brasserie de Paris until it was taken over in 2021. This acquisition gave rise to well-known sibling establishments, including Moeke Spijkstra in Blaricum, Café 't Bonte Paard in Laren, Café Ome Ko in Muiden, Café Anno 1890 in Amsterdam, and Café het Tolhuis in Hilversum.

After a long renovation aimed at restoring the historical character of the building lost over the years and bringing back the soul of the café from the past, the characteristic architectural features were heavily influenced by early nineteenth-century French architecture. Following the renovation, Haarlem once again has a true living room where people drink, laugh, converse, enjoy, share secrets and sorrows, and form lifelong friendships. The atmosphere reflects the culture and history of the city Haarlem, where you can enjoy more than 50 years of hospitality.
